

Music can strongly influence people. Firstly, good music inspires people to new achievements. It is a well-known fact, that a lot of popular musicians have started their careers because they were once struck by someone else's music. What is more, music can encourage people and cheer them up. Until the 20th century there usually was military orchestra next to soldiers during the attack, as music helped them to stay brave. Finally, positive melodies help people to cope with bad periods of life, such as melancholy. Statistics say, that one in three people who have ever suffered from melancholy used music as the main tool for overcoming it. So, music is an essential part of our life, as it can greatly affect people.
